Dothan Cotton Center Of The Cotton Belt

Probably more Cotton Handled Here Than Any Other Interior Town in Alabama, If Not in the South.

Since Sep 1, 118,509 Bales Received Here, Against 89,913 During Same Period of Last Year.

Compress records at Dothan show that this town is probably ahead of any inland town in Alabama in receiving cotton this season, if not any town in the cotton belt

From September first, this year to the 23 of this month, Dothan has received 118 509 bales of cotton

During the same period of last year the town received 89 913 bales.

For the year ending September last, this year, Dothan received about 120,000 bales, but some of this came from Troy, after that town burned down

This record thought of less than four months is a record breaker in cotton receipts.

Nothing else in Alabama unless it be Mobile, will hardly go ahead of Dothan If there is a town that received more cotton, we would like to hear from it

Cotton men think that this year's crop receipts at Dothan, will go something like 150,000 bales

There has been a time in the history of Dothan and not so many years ago when 20 000 bales was considered a good record

This shows two things It shows that the people are developing this section of the country and making more stuff than it ever made before and it shows the importance of this section as a cotton center and a market.

BURGLARS HAVE NEW PLAN

New York Dec —Graduates of the lower schools in burglary operated on a safe in a 5 and 10 cent store in Harlem today and got away with nearly $1 000 in cash The men entered by way of the skylight drew electricity from a live wire to operate their drill and with remarkable ease blew open the door Beside the safe were found five blows the burglars had evidently used during the night for prints which recently has led to the arrest and indictment of several alleged burglars

Got all you expected little chill Santa?

Be picking out a good new leaf to turn.

It always happens that somebody dies a and Christmas.

The next cold spell will thin out the fat hogs that were saved over for lack of cold weather.

The recent rains in this section showed us all again how much we need roads

It matters not much now whether you got through with your shopping early.

Hardly any one thinks of remaining away from Dothan during the holiday season

This Christmas rushing by we said reminders that many of us have passed more than we will run up with again

It doesn't seem to let cold enough down here to do away with all the bowels we think disappear when winter comes

Since the rush of Christmas shopping is over now stand up and meet your bills one the first of January like a man

Talk about your arrangements for another year, but the next month will see a nothing like that in Houston county.

The boy who didn't have a package of firecrackers in his stocking doesn't think he had such an awful good time of it

We don't see so many framed mottoes over desks as we did a while Another good sign that one doesn't have to be reminded all day that he should mail a letter

Good many people are looking out for a job late to cook January the first, but many of the farmers are figuring on what sort of guano they will use, and how much of it!

"What a some nerve Did you see that boy dog his girls father down and hand him a letter to take to the girl?" said a man the other day who had old fashion ways about girls and boys.

A man hates to let his automobile stand up in the stall and eats its board as we to speak and not get time to run it but when the roads are in bad shape, and full of water and mud) he has nothing else to [illegible]

Probably no one who hasn't tried it, doesn't realize which is the most fortunate thing that can happen to his family, to have a boy over-capitalized, or a gity that has picked up too much speed in spending money.

We see the boys and girls on the streets a few days longer and then we begin to miss them again as they go back to schools and colleges, getting knowledge and training and experience not found in Dothan.

Something has arisen in Birmingham that the News doesn't propose to stand for It is a disgusting new sort of a dance called by certain cliques of society Grizzly Bear and Turkey Trot dances But in reality indecent Birmingham has enough trouble without society springing something new in the way of a dance

A FUTILE ALIBI.

New York World

Edward H Harriman, who raised Cornelius N Bliss is dead

Sidney Webster is dead

The money that Mr Harriman raised in the last days of the 1904 campaign after his visit to the White House by which, as he said at least 60 000 votes were turned in the city of New York alone making a difference of 100 000 votes in the general result has all been spent

Now comes George R Sheldon, who knew nothing of the transaction to say that it was Mr Bliss and not Mr Roosevelt who urged Mr Harriman to raise the money And Theodore Roosevelt who knows all about the transaction writes a letter seven years after the fact to corroborate the Sheldon version

Edward H Harriman who raised the money told in a letter to Sidney Webster all the circumstances in connection with this corruption fund He had no motive for telling anything but the truth We believe that Mr Harriman told the truth We believe it regardless of anything George R Sheldon can say or anything that Theodore Roosevelt will say

There is not enough political whitewash in New York to cover up this record.

ONE BY ONE

Following the announcement of Senator Bailey that he will not be a candidate for reelection now comes Simon Guggenheim senator from Colorado with the declaration that his business will not permit him to be a candidate Texas elects her senators by primary So does Colorado and Colorado has the Oregon plan for direct vote But unlike the way the primary and the Oregon plan clarify the fate of this man who has a record like Bailey or Guggenheim Guggenheim was publicly charged with buying his seat by buying the party committee in Colorado

Guggenheim voted on the shady side of every opposition before Congress that had a shady side And most of the time on those ballots he had with him Senator Bailey who is a Democrat A Democrat who is reactionary always votes with the reactionary Republicans and betwen their progressive fellows And in practically every case where Bailey snuggled up to Guggenheim in the record votes in Congress you will find the name of Charles Curtis of Kansas recorded with those two worthies Is there any earthly reason why the State of Kansas should be represented in the Senate by a man whose record is practically the same as that of Simon Guggenheim and Joseph Bailey—both of whom are declined to run for reelection?

Are Kansas people going to stand that Kansas Guggenheim when they get a direct vote on him"—Emporia Gazette.

FATHER LOVE

Praises of Mother Love have been sung in verse and prose painted on canvass and engraved in enduring marble until there are many who may have come to doubt that the Old Man serves and cares for the offspring who comes his way Most of the singing about father has been of the kind which rates us a more or less necessary evil, who fails to come up to the expectations He does, occasionally, and oftener, perhaps, but the same rule might apply to the other side of the domestic establishment if writers had nerve enough to say so

It is a pleasure, therefore to record a goo word for father now and then, which we do herewith From the sordid and gloomy depths of a coal mine comes this tale, and yet it is as bright a bit of heroism and is evidence of Father love as strong as many children of the pools living have been for the gentler half of the family. William Kennedy is the hero of this sketch, a Pittsburg miner who daily took his life in his hands to labor in the interior department of the earth for those he loved Of itself that is some evidence of an affection worth while but it is the ordinary proof of which the world knows so much and so much ignores But finally the supreme test comes and the father made good

Following in his father's footsteps there labored by his side in the same colliery his son Came one day and dreaded white damp one of the various forms of noxious gas which add to the terrors of our most risky calling From the entries the men rushed to their of life and liberty Then the father saw his son was missing from those who had escaped He did not pause to weep and beat his breast There was just a chance that he might still be brought out in time The father took it, and with other brave men fathers too some of them, he went back when the danger lurked and brought the boy to safety The second, contact with the deadly gas however, proved fatal to the father, and he died Probably he died happy and at least bravely as a man should Mothers have done as much but they could not do more And there are other fathers like William Kennedy who are entitled to more appreciation than they get —Atlanta Globe.

Religion as Satisfaction

By Rev. Hugh T Kerr, Pastor of Fullerton Avenue Presbyterian Church, Chicago

TEXT—One thing thou lackest—Mark 10 21.

This is a character study in black and white The picture is drawn by a determined hand and there is no hint of hesitation Stroke follows stroke until the complete portrait is before us The story is as complete as it is concise It begins in comedy and ends in tragedy The young man impulsive, optimistic and temperamentally enthusiastic, hurries breathlessly into the presence of Jesus with the long troubled question of his heart upon his lips, and then when our hopes for him are highest we behold him making what Dante calls 'The Great He Goat' and returns to his old life as ill at ease and with his heart as hungry as ever

Let us not misunderstand this young man. He was no comedian trifling with sacred things and then casting them thoughtlessly away from him He was intense, enthusiastic, a nobleman at heart, and when Jesus looked upon him he fell in love with him He had climbed the ladder of lawful ambition, and while still a young man was in the council of the elders Honor did not spoil the humility of his heart and in the presence of the Master he bowed in grateful reverence Richly endowed with worldly wealth he was still more richly endowed with a nature rich in the virtues that make for righteousness

Jesus was intensely interested in this young man We read that He loved him' I think he was interested in him on account of his youth Christ and young manhood, as has been said are as magnet and steel This young man had all his life to live The years with all their possible achievements were still before him

Christ was interested in this young man because he was rich Riches and wealth mean power and power is another name for responsibility Jesus spoke hard words about rich men and about rich men who loved money, who trusted in money, who because of their money forgot about God Jesus, however did not despise a man because he was rich He loved the rich young ruler It was a rich man who begged his lifeless body as it hung crucified upon the cross Two rich men took his dead body and wrapped it tenderly in the choicest of linen and laid it away in a costly sepulcher.

Jesus knows and recognizes no class Riches and poverty to him are but the tools with which character fashions circumstances The man s the good for a' that" It is written of him that 'he made his grave with the rich in his death' There is pathos and tragedy in that sentence 'Must the Master wait till death to dwell in the habitations of the rich? May he not make his abode with the rich in his life? Let the rich man open the door and Christ will enter in to share his lonely isolation and will satisfy the hunger of his heart

Jesus was interested in this young man because he was moral His life was pure and his hands clean For him a good name was better than great riches He followed the quest of the best He was one of the Knights of the Round Table who had pledged his honor to live sweet life of purest chastity To gain the love and admiration of Jesus it is not necessary to wander off into forbidden paths of sin and to run the gauntlet of a dissipated life For all young men who are fighting sin and the devil and carrying a clean conscience in the midst of contaminating circumstances Jesus has a warm welcome

Jesus was interested in this young man who with his youth his position his influence his purity of life, was still dissatisfied and came with the cry of unrest What lack I yet' This is a wonderful thing that he should have so much and yet not have enough

Jesus answered the young man's question by a command Come follow me In a great book recently published there is this striking sentence If the gods went their way and were satisfied and the beasts went their way and were satisfied, the unrest of man can only mean that he is not rightly related to his present life Now is not that just the truth? How can a man be rightly related to this present life in which he is set if he knows not God and refuses to become related to the eternal realities that lie all around him In the world of truth and beauty and goodness? Are youth and worldly honor and riches the only things that life needs to be related to? Out of all these human relationships the cry is heard What lack I yet? And Jesus responds promptly You lack the love and the light of the presence of the God of truth'

The human heart is homeless until it finds the Heavenly Father Find God and you find rest and peace and satisfaction Religion is satisfaction Religion completes life and perfects love and only in the presence of God is the soul satisfied

No sacrifice is too great to gain this great treasure Sell all that you have and give to the poor if necessary Let nothing hold you back from following after Christ in the life of self surrender and loving service

The Light of The World

By Rev Stephen Paulson

TEXT—And the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to lead them the way and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light—Exodus 13 21

First I want you to see the connection between these two widely separated texts The one is from the account of the journey of Israel through the trackless wilderness the second, Jesus spoke centuries later as he was present at the feast of tabernacles in Jerusalem The first verse describes the customary way in olden times of leading large bodies of men on the march whether caravans or armies A tall pole was erected at the head of the marching column, on which was hung a basket of fire The glare of the fire was visible from every part of the camp at night, and in the daytime the column or pillar of smoke guided the movements of the host. The only difference in the case of the Israelites was that the Lord was in the fire, and that he controlled and guided the movements of the people. In the time of Jesus the Jews were wont to commemorate at the feast of the tabernacles the time when they were wanderers in the desert and God made provision for their sustenance and safety They lit large lamps or torches around the temple to symbolize the pillar of fire and then gave themselves up to dancing and revelry

As Jesus stood in the temple area and looked over the people he saw that they needed guidance even more than they did in the desert and that they needed light now just as much as they needed the pillar of fire of old These lights about the temple were merely reminders of past mercy and possibly many of the people had even forgotten their significance but here was he the Guide of all lives Here was he the Light of all ages So he spoke I am the Light of the world These words come down to us out of the old Hebrew temple and they pierce the center of our modern life

I am the Light of the world When the sun rose this morning it found the world here in darkness It was torpid heavy with sleep its powers were all wrapped up in sluggishness The sun found the great world sleeping and woke it It called to the dull birds and they sang their matins It sent its light over the fields and painted them in colors beyond the power of any artist to imitate It touched the flowers, and they opened their petals to the glory of a new morning; its rays entered the homes, and men awoke and began to move about their daily duties It was an awakening, an energizing, a renewal of life, this morning's sunrise

Even so it was when the Light of the world rose upon mankind It meant an awakening, new energy, a renewal of life No one can tell all that it meant when Jesus came into the world, for his coming had a thousand meanings, it had ten thousand influences which we are too dull to appreciate and too short-sighted to observe But we know that when the Light of the world came it meant a new era in history, and we know that when Jesus comes into the human heart it means a new era in that man s life Let us note one or two applications which these texts point out to us

God s people of old were not led by a road already mapped out The route was not chosen before they started But step by step and day by day they were led, and God chose the route Is not Jesus the great Leader of his people, and we have learnt a chief article of human wisdom if we have learnt to leave tomorrow to him Step by step he leads us The way may be dark and hidden from us, but it is all light and plain to him, for he is the light

As the pillar of fire was given to guide the host of Israel of old, so is Jesus the pillar of light which guides the church today Yes, he stands today in the midst of the host majestic, dominating the centuries, leading the church as the great army of God

One evidence that the Light of the world is directing the movements is that the whole church is becoming awake to its duties and opportunities The light of the morning wakes not only one class of men but all far and near So the Light of the world is sending his rays today into all hearts Great movements are sweeping over America today among the men of the churches They are realizing the folly of their own lethargy and indifference and are waking to the new morning and a new day s work The housewives have been astir long since Woman s devotion to her Lord and her self sacrificing labors have been one of the glories of the Christian church from the beginning And now the Master is marshaling the men to the front

White Slavery.

Let us rouse the church of God by turning on the light of knowledge so that all good men may unite in devising ways and means for saving the misguided and degraded at our own doors instead of expending our time money and energy in trying to convert the so-called heathen in foreign lands —Rev F W Miller Universalist, Woodlawn Ill

What it is Intended to Place Sheep on Market Following Spring Grain Should Be Corn and Oats.

If the sheep keeper is feeding to increase weight, that is, feeding to place the sheep on the market the following spring writes an Iowa breeder in an exchange, the grain ration should be corn and oats, when alfalfa or clover are provided as the roughness. If the roughness is corn fodder and straw considerable bran should be added to the supply of ration

Usually about a month or so after harvest, if there is a good crop of wheat the price of bran is lower than at any other time of the year and it is then that I lay in my supply

If the breeder has none but breeding ewes, then the ration should be oats and bran, or bran oats and peas at the rate of two parts oats one part bran and one part peas If fodder is to be the principal part of the forage a small supply of oil meal should be laid in

Closing the Summer Cottage

"Any one would think remarked the woman who had just got back to town, 'that after a person of ordinary intelligence had gone through the agony of closing up a summer cottage every year for years and years she would be capable of doing it with her hands tied behind her back and blinders on her eyes, but it isn't so There is something about the last few days of staying in any place that is distracting but the country is the worst of all. After getting every last thing done you always need a full day to do the other things you hadn't thought about.

"I always allow for that Henry never can see why, if he calculates that we can leave Thursday I always explain to him that we will leave Friday

With everything done!' he roars at me in protest Why do you think we want to stick around here with nothing to do and everything packed and the fireplace cleaned out so we can't have a fire and the rooms full of porch furniture? It's ridiculous!'

'We will leave Friday, Henry,' I tell him soothingly

"Then everybody works like mad Thursday morning Henry always comes in dragging off his work gloves and sits down with a thump

"'Well, he says, I've finished up outside. I've covered the flower beds with a mulch of leaves and burlapped the honeysuckle vines and spaded up the garden I've put away the hose and laid a board over the chimney—

'Go right up and take it off!' I tell him, severely, How do you suppose we're going to cook lunch and dinner and breakfast and lunch again with the chimney stopped up?

'Henry has forgotten all about the fact that we still have to eat so he sheepishly clambers up on the roof and throws the board down It gets split up for kindling by the cook an hour later, and there never is another that will exactly fit, so the next season we find chipmunks and mice and other wild creatures socially rooting in the cottage when we get there and are irritably disturbed at being turned out.

"'I don't see,' Henry pursues after he has disposed of the chimney board, 'why we can't take the evening train tonight. Your trunks are all packed—'

"All but the curtains and soft pillows and the candlestick and most of my clothes,' I remind him 'By the way, have you wrapped those dishes for packing in the barrel?'

"That keeps him occupied for some time. Then, too, he finds a punch bowl that we borrowed from the Perkinsons and forgot to return, so he has to walk two miles with that Then he has to attend to the man who comes to set out shrubs and then I tell him about two places in the roof that leak and he has to get asphalt and moss around and fix them Usually he still grumbles at supper time about the foolishness of our remaining over till next day, but I'm so busy fixing the canned fruit to ship back to town folding away curtains and putting away lamps that I don't mind him

'In the morning I ask Henry briskly if he has remembered to take off the window screens and take down the porch screens bring in the spade and the rake and nail up the broken place in the fence That makes him jump hastily and cry out By George! If I hadn't nearly forgot that!

'Then when he tries to turn off the water and drain the pipes he breaks a valve or something and he has to make a special trip to the village for help while the cook and I pile rugs and bricks on the leaky places and get soaked and catch awful colds

'Usually, just as we are locking up the house I remember that I haven't emptied the tank of the kitchen stove, and that reminds Henry that he has completely neglected to empty the hot water boiler He comes dragging in a watering can two flower pots and a carpet beater which have been left outside

"However we finally lock the last door and start Half way to the launch I ask him if he put out the next door neighbor's cat which had wandered in that morning Henry is peevish by now and demands to know if I think he has nothing to do but play nurse maid to a cat so we drop the suitcases and go back and unlock the place raise all the window curtains and fresh for the animal Sometimes we find her and sometimes we don't and if we don't I am haunted all winter by the fear that she has died a lingering death

'Every little while all the way back to the city I jump as I remember something I have forgotten to do I have heated arguments with Henry over whether I have left the matches loose on the fireplace mantel or not or whether I emptied the pint bottle of ink that will drip over the books if it freezes and breaks I can't quite tell whether I remembered to empty all the flower vases, either and then Henry left a box full of cigars on the writing table

'When we reach the city we are so exhausted from weariness and wrath and nervousness that we argue on speaking terms Oh, it wears off and we get back to normal eventually—and, anyhow, after you've done it over and over again for years and years you naturally get used to it!"

Winter Keeping of Vegetables.

The matter of keeping Irish potatoes cabbage onions beets etc, all winter for family use depends on climatic conditions Irish potatoes, as also beets should be guarded against freezing Beets and carrots can stand a little of it but are better off when kept from it

Cabbage stored in the cellar should be wrapped separately in double thicknesses of newspaper folding and tying it around the stem Hang each head upside down on the side of the wall or from the beams over head Cabbages can stand some freezing and thawing Onions to keep well must be put in a cool dry airy place

Storing Cabbages

Many farmers are under the impression that cabbages will keep better if stored with the root attached F H Gibbs the market gardening expert in a talk at the Minnesota state fair declared this to be a mistake the roots simply make additional weight to handle and taking up a great deal of room unnecessarily The proper method when storing is to cut off the roots smoothly as when preparing the cabbage for the table and pack in regular cabbage crates or lay on shelves not more than two heads deep

FARM NOTES

Paint the silo
Is the seed corn safe?
Let the wind or gasoline pump the water

With no cellar available roots may be stored in pits

City people not reenforced from the farms would soon run out

When alfalfa is used properly in the rotation it is beneficial to the soil

According to those who have used them, the machine husker is a success

Alfalfa from northern grown seed is hardy yet it needs winter protection

See that the winter grain is not pastured too close Winter killing is the result

Alfalfa will produce more digestible nutrients per acre than any other agricultural crop

It is cheaper to keep three or four cats around the premises than 300 or 400 rats and mice

The best method of storing roots for winter use is in a cellar to which daily access may be had

The United States hay crop this year is only 74 per cent as big as the average for five years past

The United States has only three-quarters as large a potato crop this year as last and only about four fifths as large as it has averaged for the past five years

MEHITS OF LONDON STREETS

Shiny Pavements That Look Like Ivory Ballroom Floors Give Charm to Metropolis.

After a spell of dry weather the streets in London paved with wood and asphalt become polished to a very high degree and the sheen upon Victoria street and Piccadilly, and some other roads is so remarkable that at night they shine almost like ice in the glare of the lamps

If an unused section be observed over which motor cars do not run, no polish will be seen but in the middle of the street the surface though, curiously enough not slippery in its dry state is polished like the floor of a ballroom the natural effect, when one comes to think of it of rubber and steel in juxtaposition and the slight but continual slipping of wheels over a surface of hard wood One effect of this polish is to make it impossible for any light or loose matter to rest upon it when there is any wind at all

The center of our streets has become marvelously clean and all the horse refuse is blown into the gutters near the pavement which, being often flushed with a trickle of water collects most of this light and dangerous detritus which would otherwise be blown further afield I had often written of the Ebony Way down the Champs Elysees in Paris We have now in London many ebony ways but not being given as a nation to so much overlubrication as our Gallic neighbors our roads are not so black owing to dripping oil on the surface The surface of our streets is becoming more like polished ivory than polished ebony

The effect of the road board and its grants is already to be seen all over England in regard to the making of main roads dustless An immense increase in the mileage of tarred roads is observable in nearly all the counties

Kent which had the honorable distinction of being the first to tar almost all its main roads is renewing this process wherever necessary and all around the south coast up through the western midlands and even right away to the north an immense amount of tarring has been done of late, assisted as it has been by this wonderful spell of fine weather The relief has already been very sensible to roadside dwellers and to users of the highway alike—Lord Montague in The London Cer

HOME TOWN HELPS

PRESERVE THE PEACH TREES

May Not Yet Be Too Late for Effective Warfare Against the Borer—Its Habits

The borer pest kills peach trees in the city lot oftener than anywhere else because the town man as a rule knows nothing of grief ahead until the tree is ready to topple over in a wind, rotten at the ground Washes and wrappers have been devised to control the peach tree borer but Leonard Haseman of the Missouri agricultural college says the best way is to swat it with your hand The best time, he says is some time this fall a good point to keep in the memory

The gum on the peach tree down near the ground is an unmistakable warning that the borer is getting busy Mr Haseman says the search can easily detect the presence of the borer as a rule by the masses of peach gum just at the surface of the ground The borer has tunneled through the bark and has commenced to feed upon the live bark and sap wood Sap flows through the hole in the bark, and coagulates in the air, forming the so-called peach gum

The remedy almost suggests itself Dig away the masses of gum and find the entrance to the tunnel Follow the tunnel with as little damage to the tree as possible and smash the borer on sight It is a small milky white, grub-like caterpillar Most of them are about half an inch in length in the fall being less than half grown when winter sets in

The peach tree borer in the adult stage is a moth The moth appears from early July to the middle of August and closely resembles a wasp, having clear wings and yellow and black bands about the body The moth hunts up a peach tree and deposits eggs about the base The young borer or caterpillars soon develop and at once begin to tunnel into the bark and wood of the tree Here they feed and grow On small trees often a single borer will completely girdle a trunk if not put out of business before it matures Often dozens or more will attack a larger tree

The borers continue their tunneling till fall Then they go below the surface of the ground to establish them selves for the winter.

BENEFIT OF UNITED ACTION

There seems to be strong need for central organizations where delegates for the various municipalities may meet and by comparison of notes determine where mistakes have been made and the proper method of procedure says the Los Angeles Times These meetings also stimulate activity where indifference or municipal lethargy are responsible for lack of progress In many eastern states great good has been accomplished through state federations

New Jersey was the first state in the Union to enact a model shade-tree law By the act of 1883 it provided for the planting and care of shade trees on the highways of the municipalities of the state While the increase in the number of shade-tree commissions during the last few years has shown the growth of interest in the subject the actual results accomplished by the shade tree commissions have not been uniformly successful The various tree boards have been working in an independent way and so the maximum results for the good of the state have not been secured It had been felt for some time that there ought to be some co-ordination of interests among the various tree commissions in order that the adequacy of present laws might be studied the general questions of policy considered, and help extended to newly formed shade-tree commissions and efforts made to extend the movement for the planting and preservation of shade trees in the state New Jersey now has a very effective shade-tree federation

How to Care for Trees.

With trees as with all other living things both animate and inanimate it is far easier to form than to reform. "As the twig is bent so the tree inclines" is all of truth and none of error Too little attention is paid to the training of street trees Before the winter season sets in they should be deprived of top heaviness so that when the soil becomes softened by winter rains the excessive top will not catch enough wind to blow the trees over Over heavy tops that receive the full force of the winds are apt to be torn or suffer serious splits aside from the danger of blowing over and all these evils may be visited upon a single tree

Universal Talent

"Don't you think umpires ought to receive higher salaries?

"Perhaps But they can't expect them in the face of so much competition There are thousands of people in the bleachers every day who are willing to step right over and take the job"

Selecting the Best Heifers

In fall and winter as the cows come fresh in milk will be just the time to select the most promising heifer calf to raise for the dairy With good feeding comfortable quarters and proper care they should do finely through the winter and be ready to turn to pasture another spring

Nothing in Runty Males

There is little hope for the farmer who prefers to buy runty males and considers that breeders of pure bred stock are robbing their customers If he succeeds it will be in spite of his methods not because of them

Get Blankets for Horses

Don't forget to purchase horse blankets before cold weather begins Use them when horses are hitched outside in the cold and wet The price for a horse blanket may save the price of a horse

Attention to Colt's Feet

A horse with four absolutely sound legs is worth in the market almost what ever the owner chooses to ask for him This being the case attention to the colt's feet and to the shoeing later is well worth while

To Secure Good Results

Unless you are willing to give time and attention to valuable stock don't be too anxious to acquire such Remember, however that any animal must have rational treatment to give good results

Message of Amos Is Needed Today

By Rev Henry A. Stimson D D, Pastor of Manhattan Congregational Church, New York.

It was in the days of King Amaziah of Judah and of Jeroham II in Israel. These were both long and prosperous reigns in the middle of the eighth century before Christ They were times of great luxury connected with the rapid growth of the two capital cities—Jerusalem and Samaria The old religious habits had been largely set aside by the incoming of foreigners, the displacing of religion in the court had made worldliness fashionable and with entire light heartedness the people had given themselves up to the pursuit of pleasure and of wealth

Amos was a herdsman of small desert sheep on the hills of Judah some dozen miles to the south of Jerusalem He describes himself as a pincher of wild figs which evidently he gathered from time to time to supplement by their sale the small earnings of his poor flock His home in the little village of Tekoa was on a ridge some 2,500 feet above the Mediterranean

Alone with his flock he had before his eyes many a reminder of the God of his fathers who had brought them out of Egypt and delivering them from the wilderness had led them across the Jordan and had given them the promise of this land as their abiding inheritance. And now God was forgotten and his people had fallen into the ways of the heathen

As from time to time he went down to the town to sell his fleeces or his figs he was overwhelmed with what he saw

Communing alone with God the message of prophecy was given to him It consists of three short addresses The first pronounced the judgment of Jehovah upon the nations, the second his judgment upon his own people warning them that because he had known them and loved them, therefore he would visit them in chastisement In the third, continuing our text he warns them of their danger exhorts them to return to Jehovah and recalls his vision of the blessedness that is awaiting them in the distant future

"Bring your offerings' he says "Keep your fasts, be followers of Jehovah in name God is not deceived by hypocrisy Religion is character, he sees through your shams he knows the perversion of your hearts "They that lie in beds of ivory and stretch themselves on beds and couches, that eat lambs out of the flock and sing idle songs to the sound of the viol, that drink wine in bowls and anoint themselves with chief oils and are not grieved with the affliction of Joseph they shall go into captivity, their revelries shall pass away for the Lord abhors the excellency of Jacob, and their houses shall be smitten"

In his distress over the people he cries unto the Lord Oh Lord Jehovah forgive I beseech thee and he has a vision of the turning away of the divine judgment Then comes the text The Lord stands with the plumb line in his hand and the plumb line becomes the graphic figure of the final word of God to his people

So the plumb line was given to the prophet as the message to his people

We rejoice as we apply this text to the Christianity of today Let us see what the world is to us

Let us look first to the gospel that we have to preach That never was more distinctive than it is now as the gospel of Jesus Christ We have gone through the period in which under the influences of the wonderful discoveries of science rationalistic unbelief has swept over the land and turned many away from Jesus Christ But that day was long passed and has been followed by another in which men have been trying to find an acceptable substitute for Jesus Christ

They have been running here and there after any form of religion or of worship that claimed to be new new thought or new philosophy or new revelations whether coming in the name of some mystery of Persia or India or some device masking as religion or science from Boston But men already have found not only that they cannot live without religion but that today no religion will satisfy a man other than that which reveals God

We have come back to the religion of the supernatural of the miracles and of the resurrection In short to the religion of the crucified and risen Christ We must have a religion that fits the facts of human existence

The Christian church also however much it may have erred in the past is aiming to produce the image of Christ in men It accepts the challenge to be a promoter of human welfare and in a very special way but that is not its ultimate aim its aim always is to make better men and it never was true what has been so often charged against it that it is so busy saving souls that it has not time to save men Rather by means of saving souls it has been sure that it was saving men, and everywhere today the world is awakening to see that it is the gospel rather than commerce or education or the refinement of cultured society, which is changing the world

Cause For Alarm

Mrs Winchester who has been sitting in an attitude of dejected bewilderment in front of a pile of silks of various colors and descriptions suddenly rises and plucks her friend Mrs Palmer from out of the passing throng. She drags her victim back with her to the silk counter)

Mrs Winchester—My dear I m so glad to see you that I could fall on your neck and weep You ve simply got to select a gown for me Really I ve been through so much the last two weeks that I m not capable of selecting a dish towel even if that would serve the present purpose which it won t.

It s all on account of Tom poor dear boy! Of course you ve heard that he is engaged You haven t? Well the fact has so thoroughly filled my horizon that I suppose I have got into the habit of thinking everybody else is absorbed in it too I m just heartbroken about it

Yes I was going to tell you about the girl that poor Tom s engaged to I m so distressed about it She s perfectly wonderful and charming too I don t doubt but my dear, she s the most superior creature that ever was born! She knows everything (To clerk) Yes that s very pretty but I don t think it s quite what I want

You know it s to wear at the reception that my son s fiancee s mother is going to give to announce the engagement and I m afraid that would look to plain I wonder how voile would do I m fond of voile but I really don t know what is suitable for the groom s mother Nobody ever pays any attention to the masculine side of a wedding anyway but I suppose if I looked dowdy there d be no end of talk (To clerk) Could you show me some of those things quite down at the other end? So nice of you

There s no reason on earth why everybody shouldn t be delighted Her family is very prosperous and Tom is quite able young as he is to set up a very creditable establishment. I'm so distressed about it. (To clerk) How much did you say that piece was? Oh, dear I'm sorry It does seem just what I want but really I don t feel that I can pay as much as that

When you count the making and the trimming and everything, don't you know it mounts up so frightfully Yes It's true that cheap materials are the most expensive in the end but then when you have only so much money to spend for a thing I don't know what you're going to do

Why should I object to the marriage? My dear don t for a minute imagine that I object How could I? Tom says he's the luckiest and the happiest man that ever was and I m bound to believe him It does seem so hard though to bring up a boy through all kinds of experiences—measles and mumps and besides those Tom had a perfectly terrible attack of typhoid three years ago and I stayed with him day and night and nobody had any idea he d live through it—and then to have him marry some perfectly strange girl that nobody ever heard of and that speaks half a dozen different languages! (To clerk) Could I look at that piece at the bottom of the shelf? That sort of pink ish lavender I m afraid I ll be going to be an awful bother to you to get it but it s so attractive

Yes indeed I ll admit I m sorry for her as I do for myself I think of the poor creature saddled with a mother in law who doesn t even know her own language particularly well I can just feel how that poor cultured child will shiver every time I open my mouth

Yes isn t that pretty? (To clerk) How much did you say? Well I believe I could afford that I have some lace that I could use and that will reduce the cost.

How nice it would be to be the bride s mother She always seems to wear gray satin and duchesse lace It must simplify things so greatly

Ethel—that s her name Ethel Harcourt—knows how to cook! She took domestic science Of course I can cook in a way but I wouldn t dare to ask anybody who didn t have the digestion of an ostrich to eat the things I make Ethel asked me the other day what I considered the most hysterical way to make bread! I felt like a criminal when I told her that I never had made any but that I would ask Liza the cook I have had for the last 20 years how she did it Ethel sighed compassionately

She was ready for college when she was sixteen and Tom says she simply had to fight the whole family to get them to let her go then How am I ever going to adjust myself to a daughter in law with such a super abundance of education? I never wanted an education I was too busy having a good time All that I ever learned was thrust upon me (To clerk) Yes cut it off and send it up please I've got to decide some time and I suppose I might as well decide now

Ethel seems like a judgment on Tom for having such a frivolous mother but I don t know why poor Tom should be punished for it. But then he thinks he perfectly happy, and that s the main thing."
